Financial State of Aurora, CO

Aurora’s healthy financial condition helped the city weather the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic. Based upon the city’s fiscal year 2020 audited financial report, Aurora had a Taxpayer Surplus™ of $2,600, earning it a “B” grade from Truth in Accounting.

Unlike most cities, Aurora had more than enough resources available, $365.3 million, to pay all of its bills, including public employees’ retirement benefits. This means Aurora’s elected officials truly balanced their budgets. When broken down, the amount available to pay future bills resulted in a surplus of $2,600 for each Aurora taxpayer.

Even though Aurora was financially sound before and during the pandemic, the city still received federal support from COVID-19 related grants. The surplus Aurora had plus additional funds from the grants will help the city to weather any future public health or economic crises and downturns in the market, which can cause the value of a government’s assets to fluctuate. The uncertainty surrounding this current crisis makes it impossible to determine how much will be needed to maintain government services and benefits.

The data included in this report is derived from the city of Aurora’s 2020 audited Annual Comprehensive Financial Report and retirement plans’ reports. To compare prior years and other city financial, demographic, and economic information go to Data-Z.org.
