Financial State of Kansas

Despite receiving support from COVID relief grants and other federal programs, Kansas’ overall financial condition worsened during the onset of the pandemic. Based upon the state’s fiscal year 2020 audited financial report, Kansas had a Taxpayer Burden™ of $7,500, earning it a “D” grade from Truth in Accounting.

Kansas’ elected officials have repeatedly made financial decisions that left the state with a debt burden of $6.7 billion. That burden came to $7,500 for every state taxpayer. Kansas’ financial problems stem mostly from unfunded retirement obligations that have over the years. The state had only set aside 66 cents for every dollar of promised pension benefits and has set aside no money for promised retiree health care benefits.

Kansas did not have enough money set aside to weather the pandemic and the state has been in poor fiscal shape for years. Like all other states, Kansas received federal assistance from the CARES Act and other COVID-19 related grants which came with stipulations on how the money could be spent. The state has not been properly funding its pension and retiree health care promises for years which has led to its financial condition continuing to deteriorate.

The data included in this report is derived from the state of Kansas’ 2020 audited Annual Comprehensive Financial Report and retirement plans’ reports. To compare states’ financial information go to Data-Z.org.

Kansas’ Financial Breakdown

Fast Facts

- Kansas had $5.9 billion available to pay $12.6 billion worth of bills.
- The outcome was a $6.7 billion shortfall, which breaks down to a burden of $7,500 per taxpayer.
- Kansas’ overall financial condition worsened by 15 percent during the onset of the pandemic mostly because pension plan liabilities increased faster than investment income.
